

There are useful ideas and resources being shared through the Twitter platform. If you're not on Twitter, it is very easy to join, and you don't have to share details with anyone if you choose not to. You can create an account and then 'follow' lots of useful educational (and non-educational!!) sites.

When searching on Twitter using #edchatie or #edshareie and these will bring you to a treasure trove of teachers currently figuring their way around the unprecedented situation we are in with lots of useful materials, videos and tips. It is a very vibrant community of practice which you might find of some benefit. Below are some examples:

General:

<https://www.scoilnet.ie/go-to-post-primary/>

<https://twitter.com/RichieAAhayes/status/1238477473790246913>

<https://twitter.com/PaulCahillane/status/1239214984187478016>

Follow ACCS on Twitter for sharing, posting tips, videos and lots of useful materials. @accsirl

